THE PREMISE

Law shapes culture. Religion shapes culture. Education shapes culture.

Institutional policies and practices shape culture. Most racial equity training stops at awareness. This fellowship starts there — and keeps going.

“Over 12 sessions, you’ll examine the legal, historical, and psychological architecture of racism in American institutions — not as abstract theory, but as the living infrastructure shaping your workplace, your community, and your own leadership.”

This fellowship situates Anti-Blackness within the broader context of fascist ideology and genocidal policy — examining how the legal and institutional frameworks that enabled the subjugation of Black Americans share deep structural roots with other forms of state-sanctioned dehumanization and mass violence, both historically and in the present moment. Participants will explore how fascism has manifested across the globe, and how anti-fascist and anti-genocide education are essential tools for understanding and dismantling White supremacy in all its forms.
