THE PREMISE

Law shapes culture. Religion shapes culture. Education shapes culture.

Institutional policies and practices shape culture. Most racial equity training stops at awareness. This fellowship starts there — and keeps going.

“Over 12 sessions, you’ll examine the legal, historical, and psychological architecture of racism in American institutions — not as abstract theory, but as the living infrastructure shaping your workplace, your community, and your own leadership.”

This is not a lecture series. Dante’s facilitation weaves foundational teaching with real-time processing, personal reflection, current case studies, and group dialogue that builds over time. You’ll be challenged. You’ll be supported.
